HOLLAND TORPEDO BOAT
PROVES A WONDER.SEARCHLIGHTS ON WAR SHIPS
FAIL TO LOCATE HER IN
THE TRIAL TEST.Does Not Sink Below the Surface
But Gets Within Torpedo
Range and Retires
Unseen.

NEWPORT, Aug. 21.—One of the most important tests that has ever been made at the naval torpedo station since its establishment took place tonight, and the results obtained were highly satisfactory. It was a searchlight test upon a night attack by the submarine torpedo boat Holland, and it showed that it will take more than a powerful searchlight to pick up the Holland after dark, and that she could run upon and sink any war vessel she might wish. It was also the first time that the Holland has been exclusively operated by a naval crew, and it was in charge of Lieutenant Caldwell, who was Admiral Dewey's secretary. They operated the boat in a manner which proves that others besides the builders are capable of handling her.

The attack was made on the United States tug Leyden, and the torpedo boats Rodgers and Morris were also brought into use. After the attacking boats got well away the Leyden turned on her searchlight, and at the same time the powerful light at the station was also thrown on the bay. The Holland was carrying side lights, and while these were burning she was picked up, but it was no easy matter. The torpedo boats, however, were picked up with ease, and could not at any time get near enough to torpedo the Leyden.

The lights of the Holland were put out and then the most interesting part of the test began. The Holland shot across the surface of the water, but try as they would it was impossible to find the boat, which was running awash. For half an hour the Leyden watched for the Holland, but no signs of her could be seen. She was last seen in the line of a ferryboat and some fears were expressed for her safety, but finally the lights were put out and the Leyden returned to the torpedo station. The Holland was found tied up for the night.

The crew of the Holland say that after putting out their side lights they came for the Leyden in the rays of her searchlight until within about 150 feet, near enough to use a torpedo with deadly effect; then she was headed across the bay and went equally near the flagship New York. They changed her course and headed for Newport, following in the wake of the Jamestown ferry. The crew said that they thought several times that they had been picked up, and were surprised when told that such was not the case. The boat was not fully submerged and the deck was not under water at any time.

HOW THEY WORKED IT
OVER ON OLD HAWAII.

In "The Coffee House" of the Hilo Herald the Cheerful Liar dips into politics as follows:

"How did the election go the other night?" asked the Early Riser. "It didn't go—it came our way," answered a young man at the end of the table. "This was the time when we young fellows had a fling and we are going to show you a thing or two. You fellows can't have your own way in all things, particularly elections."

"Well, you haven't answered the question," remarked the Early Riser. "Who was elected?"

"Everybody—me and the rest of them," answered the young man. "You see there were only twenty-eight of us at the nominating meeting so we nominated all of them. Two fellows got cold feet and quit, so we went outside and got four so as to make up an even thirty and we all got elected but nine, and they fell down because they didn't know they had been nominated and consequently didn't get around before the box closed. But we are all good people and we will do the square thing by the men who want to go to the legislature as well as those who want to get together and name the delegate to Congress."

"Mr. Parker, I believe?"

"Yes, Mr. Parker is the man and we are going to elect him beyond a doubt. Sam is a good fellow and knows just how to ask for things. He will be popular in the third house and will stand next to the republican members of Congress so that when he tells them that Hilo could get along if it only had a breakwater and a post-office and that Honolulu only wants Pearl Harbor fixed up and a federal building they will say, 'Sam, let's pull another cork before we present the bill.' Sam's all right and he'll poll the vote just as nice as mine. You will find that Parker and Loebenstein will poll the largest votes on election day. The white people will vote for them and so will the Hawaiians."

DRAMATIC CAPTURE OF BOERS.
Daring and Picturesque Methods of Eight Queenstown Volunteers.
LONDON, Sept. 1.—A Queenstown dispatch dated yesterday describes the dramatic capture of General Oliver during the Boer attack on Winburg. Eight Queenstown volunteers started from the town and took up a position in a donga, through which the road passed, and behind the Boer position. As the Boers retired through the donga in single file they were struck up one by one and put in charge of a couple of men, out of eight, until the Colonials had captured twenty-eight, including General Oliver and his three sons.

As 300 Boers were following behind in fairly close order, the Colonials then began hard volley firing, with the result that they killed six Boers and frightened off the others, who had no idea of the actual number in the donga.

ENGLISH PRISONERS
RELEASED BY THE BOERS.FLEEING BURGHERS OFFER
ONLY SLIGHT RESISTANCE
TO ADVANCING TROOPS.Kreuger, Steyn and Other Commanders Are Reported to Have Left for Netherlands.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Lord Roberts, under date of Belfast, August 29th, reports to the war office as follows: "Boer telegrams from Heilvetia that only a few of the enemy are there, and that this morning French's and Pole-Carew's forces will move on their flank. The advance of Dundonald's mounted troops on their front caused them to abandon a very strong position. The country thus cleared, our troops moved eastward. The South African Light Horse, after little opposition, entered Watervalhooven and drove the remnant of the enemy through the town."

French's column reached Doornhoek, overlooking Watervalhooven, with slight opposition. Dundonald, with Strathcona's Horse, is further, near Nootgedacht. We have occupied Watervalhooven and Watervald. Buller reports that Nootgedacht is apparently deserted, except by British prisoners, who are passing in a continuous stream up the line toward Watervalhooven. No Boers are visible. The natives report that Kreuger and all the commandos left yesterday for Plettenberg's Bay.

French reports the railway intact as far as Watervalhooven, except for a small bridge near the station, which has been destroyed. The following dispatch has been received at the war office from Lord Roberts, dated Belfast, August 31st: "About 1,800 British prisoners released at Nootgedacht have reached French and Pole-Carew. They are badly clothed and some are said to be half starved. Ambulances are out picking up many of the sick and weary ones. The captured officers are reported to have been taken to Robertson. Some of them escaped, including the Earl of Leitrim and Viscount Ennismore. The prisoners report that Kreuger, Steyn, Botha, Lucas Meyer and Schalk Burger left Nootgedacht August 29th for Nelspruit. The Boers seem to be scattering."
